It is a humiliating fact, but none the less a fact, that dishonesty of contractors has had more to do with of contractors has had more to do with these lamentable failures than either want of capacity or want of integrity in the getters-up of the enterprise, though these doubtless have played their part in the melancholy drama. The Southern States have passed into history as the land of promise for carpetbaggers, meaning by that term the impecunious adventurer who trades in politics as a profession, just as the "akinners," "fences," and "circular swindlers" of New York city ply their trade, and make bread by their profession.
